

KERALA FLOODS: KOCHI MAYOR SOUMINI JAIN TO CONTRIBUTE MONEY SAVED FOR DAUGHTER'S WEDDING TO RELIEF FUND

Kochi: There is nothing greater than humanity. This has been well proved by none other than Kochi mayor Soumini Jain who chose to contribute the entire money she saved for her only daughter's wedding to the Chief Minister's Disaster Relief Fund. Kerala is fighting the worst floods in a century. More than 370 people have lost their lives and at least one million people have been displaced due to rain fury over the past weeks. To show solidarity with the flood victims, Soumini Jain and her family have also decided to shorten the wedding ceremony programme. "The whole of Kerala is in a state of disaster. A grand celebration is not the need of the hour, but relief to the affected," Jain was quoted as saying by Malayalam publication Mathrubhumi. "My daughter said she is not interested in a grand ceremony. Following this, we talked with her fiancé's family. They also agreed on the decision," Jain added
